A Strong Case Made Out Against the Roundsman.

Lizzie Lawlor Stands an Exhaustive Cross-Examination.

Mamte Hannan's Story Is Hard to Break Down.

Lawyers Priend & House, counsel for Roundsman Mathew F. Dailey, whose trial on the charge of criminally assaulting pretty sixteen-year-old Mamle Hannan is now pro gressing in Part II. of General Sessions, are making strenous efforts to acquit their client

DARLEY / NO COUNSELLOR AMMON.

In spite of their announcement to Recorder they are making every effort to assail the character of the complainant and the prosecution's witnesses and endeavoring to entrap them into self-condemnations.

These attempts have met with a signal fatiure in the cases of Mamie Hannan and her mother, while Lizzie Lawlor's testimony has been given in a manner that betokened appparent truthfulness.

Lawyer House is a crafty and mercilesa cross-examiner, and when relieved by his associate, Mr. Friend, the situation of the witness undergoing questioning is not one but in spite of these facts Lizzie Lawlor yesterday acquitted herself most creditably.

Lizzie Lawlor's Strong Testimony.

The insinuations of counsel for the defense did not appear to confuse her in the least, and she positively corroborated Mamie Hannan's testimony as to the alleged assault in Joe Geller's saloon in a manner that had a visble effect upon the jury.

Second avenues, four weeks after the alleged assault to company with two men named Kerrigan and " Dory" Ware and a third man whom Dailey introduced as a notary public. and that he unsuccessfully tried to bribe her to sign an affidavit exonerating him from in January last?

Ingly damaging to their defense of an alibi, "No, sir."

Lawyera Friendan: House's merciless crossSubsequent examination of 14zzie Lawlor is easily under-

But the very line of the defense's cross-ex amination has raised a suspicion in the minds of the court spectators, if not in the minds of the court spectators, if not in the minds of the court spectators, if not in the minds of the court spectators, if not in the minds of the court spectators, if not in the minds of the court spectators, if not in the minds of the court spectators, if not in the minds of the court spectators, if not in the minds of the court spectators, if not in the minds of the court special sp the jurors, that the defense of an alibi is not spond ell founded.

"Why," they ssk, "if Dailey was not in Joe eller's saloon on the evening of March 26, "I object, this is getting monotonous." In Court: "Yes, what's the use." Mr. House—Well, I'm paid for being monotonous. well founded. Geller's saloon on the evening of March 26, and did not assault Mamie Hannan, are his counsel so anxious to prove his accusers of counsel so anxious to prove his accusers of bad character?

"And why do they object so strenuously to the admission of testimony pertinent to the alleged assault, and of Lizzle Lawior's statement that Dailey did try to bribe her as above related?"

In cross-examining Mamic Hannau yesterday Lawyer House insisted that she had not detailed all the conversation between her and Roundsman Dailey when the latter in vited her and Lizzle Lawior to go to Geller's saloon and have a drink. He finally drew from her a fifthy conark, which, if true, plainly indicated is designs towards the young girl. The fact that Mr. House kept persistently hammering away at the witness until he secured this admission has caused the inquiry:

"How did Dailey's counsel know, of this alleged remark if Dailey did go to Geller's taken to the remark itself circumstances when they left.

The witness asked Dailey what he was designed to the party entered Joe and Face that Daily did go to Geller's took room between 6 and 7 and left after a Oclock, but before 10 oclock. Mamie alleged remark if Dailey did not teil him of it? And is not the remark itself circumstances awore that she saw Dailey will be paid you by Time Sunday Pages. It also gives $1,000 free Accident Insurance. The witness asked Dailey what he was designed to be a face of the party o saloon with Mamie, as both she and Lizzle Lawlor have testified?"

When Dailey came down from the Tombs this morning and took his seat beside Lawyr Robert E. Anmon, Messrs. Friend & House's associate, he had regained his wonted air of bravado.
